

Module Title:	The Psychology and Sociology of Children and Childhoods
Language of Instruction:	English
Credits:	10
NFQ Level:	6
Module Delivered In	2 programme(s)
Teaching & Learning Strategies:	The learning outcomes will be achieved through lectures, readings and online resources. Classroom activities to include theory to practice scenarios, debates, role plays and discussions.
Module Aim:	The aim of this module is to encourage learners to adopt multidisciplinary critical perspectives in relation to children and childhood. Building on the Introduction to Psychology module in Year 1, major theorists and classic studies from child psychology will be considered in the context of up-to-date research and early years' practice. Criticisms of traditional mainstream child psychology will be examined both from critical psychologists and from childhood scholars from different disciplinary backgrounds. Drawing on the Introduction to Sociology module in Year 1, the work of key theorists and research from the sociology of childhood will be presented and micro and macro theories of childhood critically assessed. Throughout the module 'real world' examples from early years' educational settings and links to Aistear, Siolta, First 5, and DCYA Diversity, Equality and Inclusion Charter, will form the basis for multidisciplinary classroom activities, scenarios, role plays and discussions.
Learning Outcomes
On successful completion of this module the learner should be able to:
LO1	Present a written account of the work of major theorists and key research studies in the discipline of child psychology.
LO2	Provide criticisms of the discipline of child psychology from critical psychologists, sociologists of childhood and the multidisciplinary field of childhood studies.
LO3	Summarize contemporary debates and research within the sociology of childhood in regard to structure/agency; micro and macro theories of children and childhoods, and intersectionality.
LO4	Demonstrate understanding of contemporary issues and research in the multidisciplinary field of childhood studies, particularly in relation to young children as social actors and active agents; young children's participation; young children's rights; diversity, equality and inclusion in educational contexts.
LO5	Offer verbal, written and creative accounts of early years' educational practices with children underpinned by contrasting multidisciplinary theoretical perspectives.
